Prague

The machine of the astronomical clock is a significant technical monument, because some of the original components of the set are still functional. The basic structure of the machine has not changed since the Middle Ages really. The most important task of the machine was to move the astrolabe and later also the other external parts, such as the figure of death, the apostles, the calendarium, etc.

You have free time for lunch at one of the café here.

Rest of the afternoon is free, in which we suggest an optional visit to the Prague Castle.

Prague Castle is an ancient symbol of the Czech State, the most significant Czech monument and one of the most important cultural institutions in the Czech Republic - A UNESCO World Heritage site. It consists of a large-scale composition of palaces and ecclesiastical buildings of various architectural styles, from the remains of Romanesque-style buildings from the 10th century through Gothic modifications of the 14th century. The famous Slovenian architect Josip Plečnik was involved in extensive renovations in the time of the First Republic (1918-1938). Since the Velvet Revolution, Prague Castle has undergone significant and ongoing repairs and reconstructions. You may also like to choose the Audio Guide to hear commentary on the go.
